Forecast For Southwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Wednesday 29 Sep 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
A pleasant and dry day for most with sunny spells.

Today:
Any morning showers will clear by the afternoon, leading to a pleasant and dry day with lots of sunny spells. Feeling a little cooler in the breeze. Maximum temperature 15 deg C (59 deg F).

Tonight:
A dry night with clear spells for most. Cloud will build from the west through the early hours and the wind will strengthen. A chilly night, particularly in the east. Minimum temperature 9 deg C (48 deg F).

Thursday:
A windy day with patchy rain moving eastwards ahead of some heavier showers that arrive in the west by late afternoon. The best of any brightness to the east. Maximum temperature 17 deg C (63 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Dry and sunny on Friday after morning showers clear eastwards. Unsettled on Saturday with heavy rain, strong winds and coastal gales. Windy with scattered showers on Sunday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.